Accounts Receivable Technologies' CEO, Paul Errigo, is invited to speak as an expert on Champion Challenger Programs at the 2006 Debt Connection Symposium

WOODBIDGE, NJ, August 1, 2006 – Accounts Receivable Technologies (AR Tech), a leading provider of accounts receivable management and call-center services, today announced that their Co-Founder & CEO, Paul Errigo, has been asked to speak as an expert on Champion Challenger Programs at the 2006 Debt Connection Symposium.

Mr. Errigo was asked to speak on the subject because AR Tech is recognized as experts in the collection industry on Champion Challenger Programs (CCP). They have earned this reputation because of their strong track record of success as the champion on most CCPs they compete in. AR Tech also helps companies implement and/or improve their CCPs, in an effort to increase the creditors collection portfolio liquidation.

“In today’s marketplace, many champion challenger programs have grown stale. Creditors are satisfied when all agencies are within certain “Best of” percentages, rather than continuing to set new standards, pushing record breaking liquidation rates, and reducing customer complaints. The key to a HIGH POWERED champion challenger program lies in proper motivation that reaches all levels of the people engaged in collecting the money and working the program; right down to the agencies’ collectors and skip tracers” says Mr. Errigo.

Mr. Errigo will demonstrate what he has found to be the most effective and highly motivating programs in the industry today, and how to effectively implement, operate, and measure them. He will also prove why they are so effective.

The 2006 DCS is managed by Resource Management Services, Inc., and will be held at the Hyatt Regency Plaza Hotel in Hollywood California from September 6th – 8th. Comedian Jay Leno will be the featured host of the DCS 2006 Black Tie Celebration and Benefit. For information on the 2006 DCS and Mr. Errigo’s presentation, you can visit www.dcs2006.com.
